Pomona Railway Station Gallery

Surrounded by lush gardens and Mount Cooroora as a backdrop, the gallery is a community-run space committed to serving local artists and craftspeople.

When the original railway station was scheduled to be demolished by Queensland Rail, community spirit rallied and the locals worked together to acquire the buildings, moving them from the railway line to its place now.

Since opening in March 2001 the gallery has grown from two buildings to now five, creating unique spaces for creative art and crafts.

Cooroy Butter Factory Arts Centre

Located in the Noosa Hinterland at Cooroy in a old converted butter factory that was built in 1930. It was closed in 1975 and was purchased by Noosa Council for use as a community centre in 1991. In 2016

Noosa Council handed the management of the centre over to the community. The Butter Factory Arts Centre is run by the Cooroy Future Group as an exhibition, workshop and events venue, which also includes a separate Pottery Studio and Artisan Store.
